Probation for either a new hire, transferred, or promoted staff member should only be extended when circumstances beyond the staff member's control prevents the department from properly evaluating attendance, conduct, or performance. Involuntary transfers are not subject to probation. Probation should not be extended when the staff member has exhibited poor attendance and/or improper behavior or has given no indication of being able to achieve satisfactory performance even if given more time.

Staff members are not eligible to bid on vacant positions unless probationary periods have been successfully completed and he/she has been in their present position for at least six (6) months.

A regular staff member who is serving a probation period due to transfer or promotion and who fails to satisfactorily complete probation will be allowed to return to his/her former position, if available, and if that position was vacated in good standing. If the previous position is not available, the staff member may apply for vacant positions for which he/she qualifies. If no other position exists, or the staff member is not able to secure another position, the staff member will be terminated and may reapply to the University as appropriate vacancies become available.

Newly hired regular staff members (including staff members who were temporary and are now serving probation in a regular position) may be terminated at any time during the probationary period after conferring with University Human Resources. A staff member who fails to satisfactorily complete probation or extended probation will be terminated.

II. PROCEDURE:

1. Prior to the expiration of the initial probation period, a Probationary Assessment Form must be completed which indicates that either the staff member has satisfactorily completed probation, has failed probation or is having the probationary period extended. (See Performance Evaluation).
2. If a probationary period is to be extended or if the staff member is failing probation, the department should consult with University Human Resources prior to taking action.
3. Supervisors should provide regular and ongoing feedback to staff members concerning performance strengths and weaknesses prior to assessment.
4. The supervisor must meet with the staff member to discuss the probationary evaluation and explain the staff member's strengths and weaknesses observed during the probationary period.
5. The Probationary Assessment Form should be sent to University Human Resources for review and inclusion in the staff member's personnel file.
